Support The Winners

It is hard to accept a political defeat gracefully. But he who fights a losing fight takes his medicine good-naturedly, congratulating his opponent without malice or chagrin, feels himself a gentleman and wins the respect of those who have voted against him.

One result of the primary election, Chas. W. Fulton will not succeed himself as U. S. Senator from Oregon. He was the choice of Klamath County by a two to one vote.

Mr. Fulton in a manly letter to Cake, acknowledges his defeat and promises Cake his earnest support. Fultons supporters throughout the state can do no less than this, and should support Cake heartily. The Fulton men are certainly under no obligations to Chamberlain but by supporting Cake will be in a better position to demand the election of Fulton two years from now.

A strong and capable county ticket was nominated by the Republicans. Few of us voted for all of the successful candidates, and naturally there are many disappointments, but the entire ticket commends itself to the voters of the county.

Some complaint has been made because all the candidates live at Klamath Falls. Not one of the outside candidates were successful. But the outside precincts have no legitimate ground for growling at Klamath Falls on this account for they gave most of their support to Klamath Falls candidates.

All the Democratic candidates are also residents of the county seat, so there you are. (Extract from an article in the Bonanza Bulletin.)

Young men have few opportunities of speaking in public. The Fraternal Brotherhood gives that opportunity. This is all that many persons require.

English Etchings.

The great Oxford dictionary, which has been under way for a generation has reached "pre."

An exclusive toilet club for dogs, where the animals can be bathed, manicured, their coats trimmed and teeth attended to, has been opened in London.

Every night while the British parliament is in session a letter is dispatched from the house of commons to King Edward giving a summary of the proceedings during the sitting.

One of the many methods proposed to rid London of its fog nuisance was the erection of towers in different parts of the city through which it was designed to pump the foggy atmosphere and clarify it.

Flower and Tree.

There are tropical daisies a foot in circumference.

In India the rhododendron grows to a height of thirty feet. Margolids in north Africa reach a height of four or five feet.

The number of rubber producing trees in Peru is steadily growing less owing to the destructive methods employed. Systematic replanting may soon be necessary.

In India and South America there is said to be a small tree, known as the "sorrowful tree," which bears sweet scented flowers that "bloom only in the nighttime and fall off at the break of day."

Don't Be Afraid

IF THERE is sickness in the house, even the most severe sickness, and you are compelled to get a doctor, don't be afraid to bring that doctor's prescription to our store to have it filled.

IT MAKES no difference to us who the doctor is. It makes no difference how complicated the prescription is which he writes. It makes no difference how much he desires the prescription to be filled exactly as it is written. It makes no difference how much he wishes the ingredients used in the prescription to be pure.

ALL WE SAY is "don't be afraid to bring the prescription here. IT MAKES no difference whose prescription blank your doctor uses in writing the prescription, you have the privilege of taking that prescription to any store you prefer. We absolutely guarantee to you, satisfaction if you bring your prescription to us.

WE GUARANTEE that under no consideration, or for any necessary inducement will we allow a single prescription to go out of our store except it is exactly as the doctor writes it, and that it is filled with the highest quality ingredients which can be supplied to us.

"The Store that Saves You Money"

A Quaker Mania.

Many strange characters are to be found in the infirmary. In one of the southern counties of the state an old man was kept at the county house. He had a hobby for accumulating strings. Anything that he could make into a string was stolen by him. My some means he got possession of a knife, and the infirmary officials were soon missing harness. He cut in all seven double sets of harness and two saddles before they discovered him. He was scolded and punished, but at the end he said, "Well, I have lots of strings." The officials finally hit upon the plan of putting balls of cord in a locked drawer, leaving an end sticking out. He would spend a good part of the day getting this out, and then he would wind it up and secrete it in his room. They would always find it and fix it for him the next day.—Columbus Dispatch.

Carlyle's Amenities.

Carlyle had his slings against science, but they were not very virulent. Nevertheless in regard to literature he placed himself in the position of the ill bird that fouled its own nest, as witnessed the following amenities: Keats is "curried dead dog," whatever that may mean; Shelley is "a ghastly object," Coleridge, "a puffy, obstructed looking old man talking in a maddening sleep an infinite deal of nothing;" Lamb, "a peacock, with a thin streak of cockney wit, nothing humorous but his dress;" Walter Scott, "a toothless retailer of old wives' fables;" Brougham, "an eternal grinder of commonplace;" Wordsworth, "stooping to extract a spiritual catchup from mushrooms that were little better than tondostools;" Sir Robert Peel, "a plausible dog;" J. W. Croker, "an unchanged dog;" Lord John Russell, "a turnspit of good pedigree;" Lord Melbourne, "a monkey."

Booth and Macbeth.

There is no question that "Macbeth" is a great drama, great literature and, above all, a great acting play. But the exactions of the central character are such that the play is often kept from the stage for years at a time or else butchered by a tenth rate actor trading on the magic of Shakespeare's name. Edwin Booth, although not a big man physically, was the greatest of American Macbeths. Yet Booth was always dissatisfied in the role, for the reason, he said, that he never felt right in it because he lacked a really great Lady Macbeth. When in 1887 he and Lawrence Barrett formed their famous alliance Barrett asked Booth to select his ideal of Lady Macbeth. Barrett's expectation was that Booth would name the late Mme. Januschek. Instead he named Helena Modjeska. Barrett, a greater business man than actor, promptly arranged to separate from Booth for a season, that of 1888-89, and let Booth and Modjeska tour as co-stars, using "Macbeth" as their principal offering. They did so with great success, and Booth had realized his dream of playing via-via with a great actress as Lady Macbeth.—Baltimore American.

Some people will steal before they will starve, while others have to starve awhile before they will steal.

Some people must have borrowed a lot of trouble in their time the way they have it stacked up about them.

Nothing matters very much, but there is always so much to matter.

An apple was never known to turn into a plum, but a peach often helps to make a pair.

It is easy to get something for nothing. The consummate satirist knows how it is to be done and is the only party to the transaction who knows that it is being done.

A man usually pleases himself when he marries, but he sometimes finds it hard to keep pleased and married at the same time.

The best thing a mother can teach her child is how to get along without her.

The man who delights to hear himself talk is generally alone in his enthusiasm.

A Light For the Young Pickett.
General Grant had been a dear friend of my soldiers ever since the Mexican war. At the time our first help was born the two armies were facing each other, and they were facing coffee and tobacco under the truce. On the occasion of my birth bonfires were lighted in celebration all along Pickett's line. I saw them and sent scouts to learn cause. When they reported to me General Ingalls:
"Haven't we some kindling on the side of the line? Why don't we have a light for the young Pickett?"
In a little while bonfires were burning from the Federal line. A few later there was taken through the baby's silver service engraved, George E. Pickett, Jr. from his father's friends, U. S. Grant, Robert's friends, George Buckley.—Mrs. Ingalls in McClure's.
